The War Today...

WELL. Finland has completed the circuit. Ending her second war in five years, she finds herself involved in a third.

Of all the by-products of the main war, Finland's situation is probably the strangest. She fought one war to prevent the Russians from taking territory vital to her defense. By a brave stand and with the aid of one of the smartest propaganda campaigns ever waged, she had the sympathy of a large portion of the world, although her defeat proved later to have been essential to the cause of the United Nations.

Then she installed a government which appealed to all her patriotic instincts, although actually it was pro-Nazi as well as anti-Russian, and when she thought the opportunity was good, joined the Hitlerites against Russia in a futile effort for revenge. England joined Russia in the war on Finland. The United States did not, although American weapons in Russian hands were what finally reversed the German-Finnish tide.

And now Finland fights Hitler. Yet, in one of the strangest angles of the whole Finnish case, Germany has actually handed her a hope for the future where, two months ago there was almost none.

Had the Germans withdrawn from Finland as agreed, the little country would have ended the war merely as the beaten satellite of Hitler, ranged against more than 40 nations. Now that Germany has forced her to the other side, Finland has a chance, in the short time remaining, to place herself in a much better position.

That Finland will be entirely welcomed into the winning fold is more than she can expect. Although a great portion of her trouble arose merely from the fact that she lives in the wrong place and was doing what had to be done, she didn't have to like it. She may come out better than Italy, which earned only contempt, but not much. Even once-sympathetic Washington will remember the Finnish acts which caused the ouster of Minister Procopé despite his great personal popularity.

And the Russians are going to collect, in cash, strategic rights, and territory.

Commissioners Delay Naming Home Physician

LISBON, Sept. 19.—County commissioners today announced that no appointment would be made until after the first of the year to fill the vacancy created when Dr. James C. Gruber, official physician for the county home, died recently.

Because of the shortage of doctors in Lisbon, they said, no doctor could take the appointment. Two, however, have volunteered their part-time services to the home.

JAPS SUFFER HEAVY LOSSES IN FOUR DAYS

5,429 Reported Killed In Bitter Fighting On Peleliu, Angaur

(By Associated Press)

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Sept. 19.—American drives on Peleliu and Angaur islands in the southern Palau group gained momentum today as the Japanese showed signs of weakness under the terrific attack which cost them 5,429 dead in the first four days' fighting.

The Peleliu airstrip, one of the biggest and best of captured Japanese fields, was being used by American planes. To the north the First Marines pushed ahead across rough coral ridges, after capturing the island's main town, Asay, two adjacent villages and an offshore islet. The Japanese were falling back.

Leif Erickson, Associated Press War correspondent, reported in a dispatch that Japanese commanders had shacked their men in observation posts and caves to insure their death stand, while "G.I." bodies had been converted into booby traps.

On Angaur island, six miles southward, the 81st (Wildcat) army division spread up its lightly opposed advance. The infantrymen captured Salween town, the principle settlement, with its artillery-wrecked phosphate refinery, once vital for Japan's explosives, and the largest railroad yard in Oceania.

Capture of the town meant the army spearheads had pushed southward more than half the length of Angaur. The Japanese apparently were withdrawing to the extreme tip for a final stand. Their dead through Sunday totaled 48.

A navy communiqué said that for the same period Japanese killed on Peleliu totaled 5,495. By contrast 2,400 Japanese were buried on Guam in the first four days of that campaign, the total eventually rising to cover 14,000. Field dispatches from Peleliu said American casualties were light.

On Morotai island, 375 miles south of Davao, Southwest Pacific force continued to scout for the disappearing Japanese garrison.

Carrier-based American aircraft made their heaviest assault on adjacent Halmahera island, source of potential Japanese reprisal attack flying 150 sorties Friday. Neutralization rds continued against Dutch Celebes, to the southwest.

BRICKER SPEAKS IN ERIE, PA., AFTER CHICAGO ADDRESS

(By Associated Press)

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 19.—Gov. John W. Bricker, bidding for Pennsylvania's 35 electoral votes, declared today that the Republican party's platform could be accepted "at full value with an assurance of performance."

"The Republican party through the leadership of the party in congress and through the administration of 20 Republican governors," said the G. O. P. vice presidential candidate in a prepared speech released by his campaign staff, "has reestablished the Republican party in the confidence of the people of the country."

In contrast, the Ohio governor told a crowd in the concourse of Union station, "The New Deal today only looks forward to unemployment and proposes measures to alleviate conditions arising out of unemployment."

Bricker said the integrity of a political party was measured by the promises it kept, and that the

HITLER NOT MAD

Doesn't Bite Carpet, Roll In Convulsions, German Soldiers Are Told

ROME, Sept. 19.—The following order by a Nazi political education officer of the German First parachute division was seized on the Italian front today:

"Officers must counteract with all possible means and with conviction assertions made by the enemy as well as even some of our own people that the Fuehrer goes mad with rage and when he is in that state he tears down curtains, bites the carpet in his rage and rolls in convulsions on the floor."

The order added that their are witnesses who know Adolf Hitler "is well above such a lack of control," although "many a man in the street if he were exposed to the disappointments and grief which the Fuehrer has to bear would have gone under long ago."

FINLAND, REDS MAKE PEACE

Terms Are Approved By Finnish Cabinet At Special Meeting

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Moscow radio announced today that Finland had signed an armistice with Russia and Britain.

A dispatch from Stockholm said it was reliably reported three that the armistice terms were approved formally by the Finnish parliament in an early morning session.

A Finnish news agency dispatch to Stockholm from Helsinki said the deputies assembled in a closed meeting at 6:15 a. m., at which time the government presented "a document." Shortly afterward the parliament passed to the order of the day which, under Finnish parliamentary procedure, constitutes a vote of confidence.

Finnish sources said they expected the terms would be published officially later today, the Stockholm dispatch said.

There still was no reliable advance picture of the details of the armistice, but the Swedish press generally, on the basis of fragmentary reports, characterized them as "hard."

The stipulation causing the Finns most anxiety was said to be a Russian demand for a 30-year lease of the Porkkala naval base on the Finnish gulf. Stockholm reported that one well informed Finnish source said this demand embraced use of territory stretching inland from Porkkala to a point only eight miles from Helsinki.

This same source said Finnish troops already had begun operations against the Germans in northern Finland, but it was unknown whether actual fighting had developed. In some areas the Germans were said to be retreating.

The Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said last night that the Finnish troops en route north were spurred on by resentment over burning farm buildings and villages. A Berlin broadcast acknowledged there had been some demolitions, but denied any "wanton burning" of Finnish property.

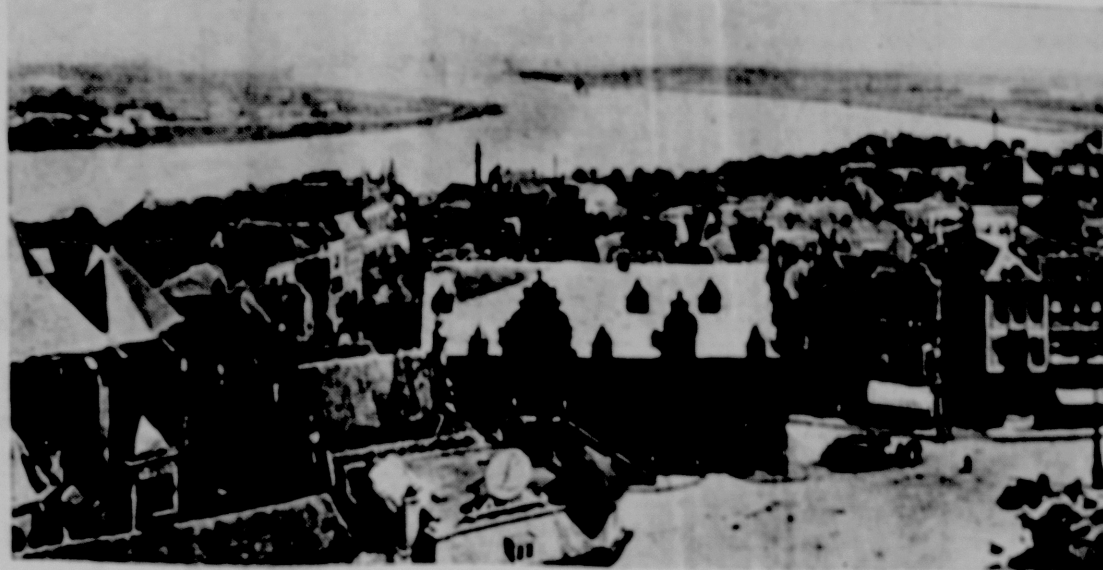

Lumber Yard and Grain Storage Ruined By Fire

TOLEDO, Sept. 19.—A fire aided by a strong wind today swept through the Maumee Lumber & Supply Co. and the Maumee elevator of the Toledo Grain & Milling Co., causing damages estimated at more than $200,000 and injuring one person seriously.

George Head, 63, a lumber firm employee, was hospitalized for burns. Damage to the grain elevator was estimated at $32,000 by A. E. Trost, company president. Ralph Burd, chief of the Maumee volunteer fire department, reported loss to the lumber company which was leveled by the fire would mount to $30,000. The fire of undetermined origin was fought by Perryburg and Maumee volunteer fire departments.

Small Plants Corporation's Role Outlined

Salem Business Bureau Hears Discussion By SWPC Assistant

While utilization of facilities of small plants for the war effort and for essential civilian merchandise remains the main function of Smaller War Plants Corp., a government agency, members of the Salem Business Bureau, meeting Monday noon at the Lape hotel, were told by Samuel R. Christophersen of Cleveland, special assistant to the corporation's regional director, that many additional services are rendered today.

"More than 322 million dollars worth of business have been secured by small manufacturers in the Fifth region with the assistance of SWPC since July 1, 1943, and over 216 million of this amount from Jan. 1 to Aug. 31 this year," Christophersen said. "However, with cutbacks changes of design and the new articles necessary for changing war conditions, SWPC's service in assisting small plants is needed more today than ever before."

When a contract is cut back or cancelled, the corporation helps locate other contracts or sub-contracts for the manufacturer affected, the speaker said.

An important current service is the role in guiding and assisting small companies with appeals against WPB limitation and M. O. orders. The service is available where difficulties are encountered in obtaining allotments of material or in problems resulting from price controls.

Technical advisory service, a consulting service, endeavors to secure the answer to problems relating to manufacturing, management, maintenance, marketing, materials, processes and equipment. Any small firm having any of these problems was told to write completely and concisely to SWPC.

Christophersen was introduced by L. H. Colley, president of the bureau, who also presented Noble ones of Canton, district manager of SWPC. The district includes 17 counties, among them Columbiana.

Police said the departing guest removed the door between the lobby and bar of the hotel, looted the cash register, cigar case and bar before he continued on his way.

Legionnaires Hear Nimitz, Arnold Forecast New Blows

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—American Legionnaires went into the second session of their annual convention today pondering tidings from high ranking war leaders of blows to be delivered against the nation's enemies.

From Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, they heard that the conquest of the Philippines would be the job of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Southwest Pacific forces, with the navy supporting and protecting the campaign.

From Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, they heard that the aerial arm had been built up to carry air warfare "into the very heart of Germany and Japan," and that the army long had been planning an "all-out" punch at the Both addressed Legion members last night—Arnold in person and Nimitz by radio—after Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army's chief of staff, had disclosed that 60 American divisions had reached the fighting fronts and that eight more would sail this month.

Nimitz, discussing the general drive westward in the Pacific, said: "When Palau falls, a formidable obstacle to our eventual return to the Philippines is swept away, and we will have a base from which to cover and support MacArthur's Philippine campaign."

Gen. Arnold stated maintenance of the air forces in top fighting form is essential to our future safety and termed universal military training a necessary national policy.

He also submitted that "we must have air bases under our control—spread far out beyond our shores where they are needed."

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans affairs, told the delegates today that "Victory in Europe would seem to be within our grasp in the not too distant future," and that "this time American doughboys will march down the streets of Berlin." He asserted, in a prepared address, the returning warriors must have "full employment."

Mrs. Katharine Kennedy Brown of Dayton, Ohio, committee woman and national vice chairman, said it would be Brown's first major address since assuming direction of the party.

Rhine Battle Operates On Broad Front

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Sept. 19.—British troops, joining hands with a great sky-borne army dropped in Holland in a thrust to break into northern Germany, have captured Eindhoven, seventh largest Dutch city, a front dispatch declared today.

The British charged forward 16 miles in 24 hours. They linked with some of the parachute and glider forces who by German account already were across the Rhine in central Holland, threatening to roll up the Nazi flank just as the Brittany break-through did in France.

The battle of the Rhine meanwhile began on a broad front to the south as three American armies ripped deeper into enemy cross-river defenses shielding Cologne, Strasbourg, and Mulhouse.

Eindhoven, a big communications center, and Geldrop, seven miles to the east, were swept up by the British Second army plunge up from Belgium. They lie 10 miles inside Holland from the Belgian border. The British already had struck on farther north, coming to aid of Allied sky soldiers cutting the Germans from village after village, and seizing strategic bridges and crossroads.

Berlin, which yesterday declared the airborne troops had been wiped out, today detailed the areas where Lt.-Gen. Lewis H. Brereton's plane-ferried men were fighting.

Front reports said the Germans rushed in heavy artillery in a desperate attempt to halt the forward shove of the airborne army.

Berlin declared more troops had landed from planes and gliders for the third successive day, and hinted some sort of a counter-attack at the Rhine delta, in the area where Rotterdam, Amsterdam and the Hague lie.

Such landings would threaten a quick turning of the Rhine as a defensive position.

Evacuation of the Brittany port of Brest also was acknowledged by German broadcasts.

While the flanking sweep developed in Holland, the main weight of the Allied land assault was battering through the Rhine delta on the last 20 or 25 miles to Cologne. Other United States columns were hitting through the Lorraine gap in new gains beyond Nancy, and closing steadily upon Belfort farther below, gateway to southwestern Germany.

The Germans hurried in reserves from the Russian front, risked some of their remaining planes and fired their biggest artillery batteries since Normandy. But despite their stiffened stand, Americans captured four more border towns, and reached at least three others.

Greatest Airborne Feat
The air vault into Holland — in the greatest airborne operation of war's history—carried the gravest immediate menace to the stubborn Nazi defense of the homeland.

Wage Rates By Formula

The WLB panel which, apparently has given President Roosevelt a green light on revision of the "little steel" formula—upward—widely and necessarily admitted it did not know how much living costs had increased since January, 1941. The fact is, of course, that no one knows.

For different wage earners supporting families on identical wages, the cost of living has increased in different amounts. Some had good breaks, some had bad ones. Some lived in communities where prices rose sharply, some in communities where the rise was moderate, perhaps even less than the increase in the bureau of labor statistics index which is the only available statistic with any official standing. Some wage earners responded to the increase in their earning power made possible by full time and overtime by saving money, while others had an opposite reaction and spent money in ratio to their higher rate of income. All that the bureau of labor statistics index ever purported to be was an indication of the increase and decrease in prices of certain basic commodities and services; it was never intended to be a guide to the cost of living, which is so widely variable that it defies statistical analysis.

It may be that the attempt to subvert the index to this unnatural purpose will prove in the long run the only really important consequence of the controversy over the "little steel" formula for wage stabilization. If wage rates are to be tied to a statistical abstraction when it is moving in one direction favorable to an increase—then they logically could be tied to the same abstraction when it moves in the opposite direction. In short, it is not too soon to begin to wonder what would happen now if the bureau of labor statistics index began to decline—would wage rates, thereupon, be expected to decline with it?

Hitler's Worst Moment

Unexpectedly quick success in breaching Germany's western defenses seems to confirm again the fallacy of static defenses. The Westwall is the end of the great lines in World War II. While the Gothic line in Italy still is a factor in the fighting there, it could be shattered with a fraction of the tremendous power loosed in France.

The fact is, however, that the fallacy of static defenses is not so much military as political. Militarily, such lines perform their function, which is to provide defense up to the point at which an opponent concentrates enough power to break them. Thus, the original purpose of the Westwall was to offset the Allies' inferior striking power in the west while Germany attacked Russia; that purpose was satisfied. No one knows better than the German generals that the Allies now have striking power of such magnitude that their western defenses have only nuisance value.

But politicians cannot afford to be realistic about such things. French politicians in 1940, like German politicians now, could not tell their people the truth; the people wanted to believe in the Maginot line. The fault is not confined to Europeans, either. Americans wanted to believe Pearl Harbor was unassailable, and it will be many a long year before they recover from the shock of discovering that Japan had massed enough striking power to offset it temporarily as the key to our Pacific defense. The breaching of the Westwall, however important it may be from a military standpoint, will be twice as important in its political effect inside Germany. Adolf Hitler has had his worst moment of World War II.

Remote Control Destruction

The shape of the next war—the one which is going to be prevented—is being determined by the experience of this one. The technique of the future will be increasingly toward remote control destruction.

The Germans announce they have a radio-controlled explosion boat which has been doing heavy damage in the English channel. Their robot bombs were a ghastly success. They have been experimenting with remote control on land tanks and aerial torpedoes. Submarine torpedoes, no doubt, will be subject to control. The airplane which releases another explosive-laden plane and guides it to its destination has been introduced.

The United States announces it is abreast of all these developments, and it may be taken for granted they will not be neglected by any other power. Increasing mastery of the mystery of electronics is determining the weapons of destruction for the future. Unless they are mastered, in turn, by corresponding increases in men's mastery of their hatreds, such weapons will surely have their day.

All of the so-called modern weapons of the current war were tried out in World War I—The bombing plane, the strafing plane, the tank, land mine and torpedo. The devices of destruction lie in the public domain, so to speak, accessible to those who choose to use them. The problem of peace is not weapons, but the decision to use them.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, September 20
A MODERATELY successful and busy day is read from predominant planetary aspects, both lunar and mutual. Employers, influential persons, especially in political, diplomatic, community and corporation affiliations, should move to satisfactory agreements, which should be made with care and consideration, and with a degree of precaution against speculative investments and other dubious alliances. In personal relations there may be happy readjustments with elders or relatives.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of moderate success and happiness, with some sort of public or group recognition and cooperation. Employers, elders, and those in influential posts may be approached for support and favors with confidence, a friendly condition also to be found in connection with social, domestic or literary affiliations. Public relations and travel are encouraged.

A child born on this day should be possessed of versatility and talents fitting it for progress and a place in literary, business or domestic and social prestige and success, with elders cooperative.

Fortunate Second Thought

Probably we should rejoice in the report that delegates conferring at Dumbarton Oaks have decided to give the smaller nations a voice in establishing and maintaining peace through international cooperation. Actually, we might be a trifle aghast to learn that they had strong notions to the contrary at first.

It has also been reported—all in reports, leaks and rumors from this closed conference—that early drafts of the security plan gave power of veto only to the four major powers. This would have allowed these powers to requisition facilities and troops from small nations without giving them a chance to vote on or even discuss the decision. Happily, the delegates seem now to have seen the light.

Some engineering problems tend to increase or develop when a small working model is expanded to full-scale plant operation. Perhaps the same is true in moving the machinery of peace from a national to an international scale.

But it is hard to see how the diplomatic mind could have departed quite so far from established principles of fairness as they seem to have in their first draft of a world-wide security union.

That first draft would not have been discernibly different from a move in this country to refuse the representatives of our less populous states the right to vote on a declaration of war, and then to draft the soldiers of those states for the armed forces.

In short, the delegates' early philosophy was, as one of them is said to have eventually discovered, "taxation without representation."

Maybe all this is undue worry about something that never happened. But it is nevertheless disquieting. It is nice to know that the idea of a virtual coalition of big powers has been abandoned, and that small nations will not be voiceless in any dispute between a small power and a great one. Yet it would have been nicer to know that the idea never came up.

Here, it seems to us, is one more argument for calling off the guard at Dumbarton Oaks and letting the world know what goes on there. Otherwise the conferring governments must face the certainty that some of their citizens will make the suspicious accusation of "open covenants" arrived at in secret session.

And they will not be able to keep those citizens from wondering what, if anything, went on that didn't leak through the secrecy.

The height of foolishness is living expensively to impress the people who live expensively to impress you.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Fatigue Symptoms and Their Causes

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IF I WERE a young physician coming about for a life work or a theme for study I would choose the symptom of fatigue. I believe that if a man understands that all medical mystery will be opened to him.

Everyone knows what it is. Everyone has experienced it. It is the second commonest of all symptoms. Meakins found that 66 of a 1,000 complained most of weakness or fatigue. And yet familiar as it is what does it consist in? Where is it located? How can you describe it?

It occurs as a perfectly normal and explainable result of exertion, a long period of concentrated work. That is physiological fatigue. It occurs as a symptom of many, if not most, organic diseases, as a constant accompaniment, not the result of exertion. And, as we all know, in the form of "that tired feeling" it is the congenial endowment of a certain class of people who do nothing to deserve it. In fact the only classes of human beings who do not seem to suffer from fatigue sometime or other are idiots, Vice-presidential candidates, and little boys.

Fatigue Manifestations

How do you know when you are fatigued? It may seem a foolish question, but, according to Dr. Donald Laird, who has studied it in a psychological laboratory, fatigue may manifest itself in many unexpected ways. Restlessness, for one. Excessive perspiration, candy and tobacco taste flat, itchy, a tendency to laugh senselessly, a tendency to misplace constantly used articles, such as spectacles or false teeth, a tendency to change to another job before completing the one you are on are some of the others.

Physiologists have talked for a long time about the accumulation of fatigue substances in the blood, but the only definitely proved chemical substance found is lactic acid.

Causes of Fatigue
Study of the causes of fatigue resulting from exertion show preponderantly that it is not so much the exertion itself that will cause fatigue as extraneous factors—such as lack of rest pauses, inadequate sleep between working days.

and light, noise, vibration and ventilation. When noise in a work room is louder than 45 decibels it precipitates a body reaction consisting of tenseness of muscles both voluntary and involuntary and increased blood pressure. Profound fatigue, under test conditions, showed these reactions 18 per cent more when typing in a room with 55 decibels noise than in the same room with 40 decibels noise. Vibration is what tires you in automobile or train riding.

Nutrition, as might be expected, plays a constant and major role in reducing fatigue. No, not vitamins, just plain old sugar! At Calkins University fatigue recovery on climbing two flights of stairs was carefully measured and the fatigue recovery value of eating sugar before hand can be calculated in almost mathematical terms. The improvement on sugar days was 8.9 per cent better for the motor-visual reaction time, 11 per cent better for body sway with the ataxiograph, 2 per cent better for eye-hand coordination, and 1 1/2 per cent better for attention test. That is getting it down pretty fine. It certainly justifies the mid-morning and mid-afternoon snack, and shows up the pop and cola and ice cream and candy bar vending machines not as a base commercial form of pandering, but as a highly scientific and properly accredited aid to industry.

M. W.—Should a woman who is pregnant take calcium phosphorus wafers? If so how much and what kind?

Answer: The pregnant woman needs lots of calcium and phosphorus, but the best way to get them is in ordinary food stuffs—milk, eggs, vegetables, fruits.

E. L. M.—I am a middle aged woman and for the past 18 months I have had a slight discharge from the left nipple. I have no lump and no sore spots. What should I do?

Answer: Run, don't walk, to the nearest doctor and submit to a thorough examination. It may or may not be serious.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Matthew said irritably, "We've been quiet enough ever since we were married because of your mourning. I thought, in a few months, we'd have a little more fun."

"Hasn't it been fun?" she asked, her eyes intent.

"Yes, naturally. But confound it," he said, "you're young, you're lovely. I want to take you places, show you off—I—"

Judith interrupted, "As if I were a new car or a new toy?"

"Don't be idiotic," he frowned, "that isn't like you. Sounds like a bad play."

She said, "You spoke about plenty of time. Well, there's always time for that sort of thing, Matthew."

"If you have a baby, that means more months of—staying home, being quiet—"

He broke off and she saw the shadow in his eyes. She thought: He hates my being ill, even the thought of it. I suppose that's natural, not only because he loves me but because he's with people who are ill all day long and sometimes half the night. But he's thinking of Irene too and how she died, before she could have her baby—

Judith was not disturbed, because of this. She was filled with pity for him, with pity for the unfilled ghost, gentle and effacing, which had once been a living woman and his wife.

Matthew said, "I won't have it. I told you how I felt about it and that's that. I simply won't have it."

"Very well," she turned to adjust her little hat before the mirror. "Let's go, shall we? We're late as it is—, but we can see one of the features."

At the door Matthew caught her hand against him. He declared, "If anything ever happened to you—"

"Nothing could," Judith said serenely. "Don't worry so. And the best thing that could happen to me," she added, "would be to have your child."

"You get your own way too much. But not this time—, Mrs. Norman," he told her.

During the late spring, Mary took a small house at Easthampton and suggested that Judith and Matthew consider it their own— "until you have one," she added.

She and Judith had been looking for a little place near New York, one within commuting distance where, when Matthew was free, they could spend weekends, but as yet they had found nothing suitable.

"We'll have to build," decided Matthew, "although where, I wouldn't know. But with things as they are it isn't a bad idea, financially speaking, to own the roof over our heads."

Matthew said, "I don't know, but that's the way he is." Matthew's office nurse answered. She sighed. "I've been lying with you so much. But I wouldn't for words help create a situation. And also, on the frank and brutal side, I must not jeopardize my job—, I can't afford to."

Judith said after a moment, "You're trying to tell me—"

"You know," Elizabeth interrupted, "without my telling you."

"But that's absurd," Judith told her, flushed.

"Yet you haven't really denied it," said Elizabeth shrewdly, "you're far too honest. You can't sit there over your skimp salad and say with any conviction that Matthew likes to have his office nurse and his wife lunch together once a week or so, or spend a Sunday together, or make a foursome for dinner at each other's houses."

"Matthew," asserted Judith, "has some very odd ideas. I don't subscribe to them. And I don't intend to have him dictate to me about my friends."

"I'll miss you," said Elizabeth serenely, "but that's that. There's no use making matters worse. We're friends, and that remains. But if Matthew believes it wise to run his office quite separately from his home, and never the twain shall meet and all that sort of thing, it is best, I believe, to give in gracefully. I don't suppose he'd really make an issue of it, yet he could make me very uncomfortable," she said thoughtfully. "I don't like being uncomfortable."

Judith protested, "You're wrong—I—"

"You hadn't your usual conviction when you said that," Elizabeth told her. "Don't look so distressed, Judith. One of these days I'll retire into my little flat and become a good housekeeper and a martinet of a mother, and then things will be different. But I cannot," she went on, trying to smile, "bite the hand which, at present, feeds me. You may think I put a job above friendship. I do, in one sense. Yet I put your happiness above that."

Matthew getting his way again, Judith told him so that night. She asked, with spirit, "What have you been saying to Elizabeth— about me, that is?"

"Nothing," said Matthew, and remarked that the steak was overdone.

Judith refrained from replying that he had been later than he expected for dinner and had not telephoned. "There must be something. I saw her today," she persisted.

He shook his dark head. "It's your imagination. Aren't Sam and Hilda coming in for contract, darling? That's good. I hope I'm not called out. I've had a pretty tough day, and I'm dog tired."

She said, "I'll call the party off if you like, and you can go to bed early. You know you never do when they are here. You sit up and talk until all hours after the last rubber."

"For Pete's sake!" he declared, "don't do that! It relaxes me."

Judith thought, Well, that's that. I can't select my own friends or even my own time in which to have a baby. And he won't talk about it. That's the most maddening thing of all.

Matthew wouldn't. Yet later in the summer he said casually, "I knew it would work out better if you didn't see so much of Elizabeth socially."

"How do you mean, 'work out'?" asked Judith. "And by the way, it was her doing, not mine."

"It was," his brows drew together for a moment, then his face cleared. "Well, she had more sense than you. It doesn't mix, I tell you. I've proved it too. I think you have a hundred friends," he said carelessly, and added smiling, "which has been very good for business."

Judith said after a moment, "I haven't recommended you— Dr. Norman—if that's what you mean."

"Very reprehensible," her husband told her, unruffled. "It's part of your job."

She said, after a moment, "And you see those friends of mine professionally—, some of them socially, now that we're going out more, accepting more invitations. That doesn't seem to hamper you."

He looked at her with the utmost astonishment. "It's quite different," he protested.

"How?"

"Elizabeth," he explained shortly, "is an employee." He looked at her, puzzled.

His wife asked, "Matthew, must you always have your way?"

"It's my way if it doesn't happen to be yours? How like a woman," he told her.

"That's logical enough," Judith retorted. She added, "I always thought you were spoiled."

"Who spoiled me?"

"Your mother, first of all." She paused a moment, added briefly, "And, of course, Irene."

He said, "You're crazy. I've always stood on my own feet. No woman has had any influence— except you," he added, smiling at her, "and you have altogether too much."

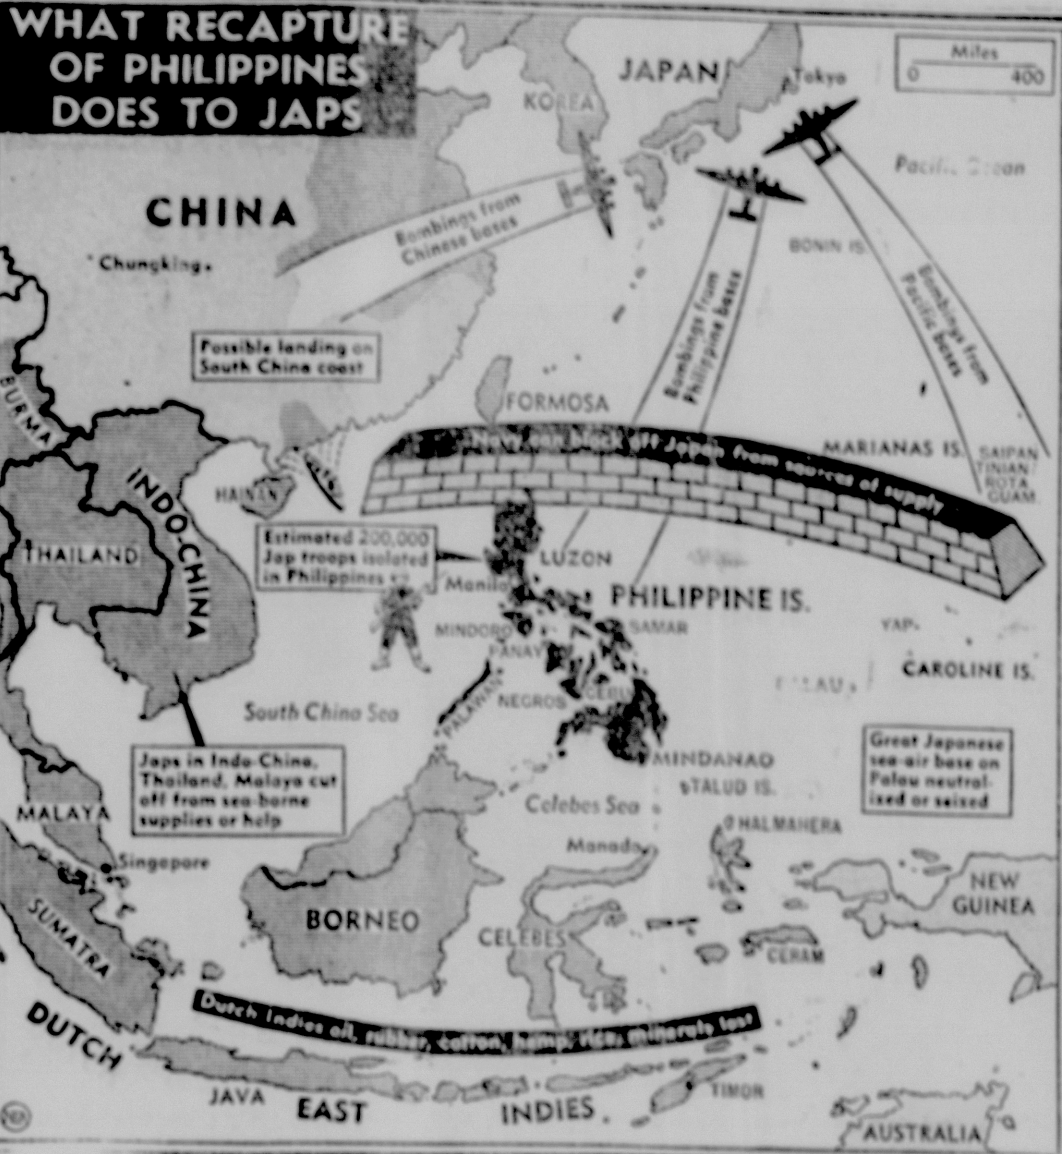

Judith thought: Yes, of course. I could fight this Elizabeth thing to the finish with you and win. And the other, more important, too I'd use my one sure weapon—, (To be continued)

These Are The Gifts Servicemen Will Want

Photos of the Folks and Fancy Foods Are First On His Christmas List

What a guy overseas wants more for Christmas is a new picture—pocket-sized and in a waterproof folder—of his mom, wife, child, sweetheart, and brother or that multi-called "Tosser." With that taken care of, there are other gifts which he will prize if they satisfy a sweet tooth, amuse him, increase his comfort or have a sentimental value.

There are also gifts which he frankly doesn't want, and in a few beties. If he's where he can't get them, he'll like these: Fruit cake, lobster pots, anchovy and other tinned spreads, baked chicken, nuts and chocolate provided as additions to his G. I. wardrobe wool-lined leather gloves, sleeveless sweaters and knit-wool helmets to insulate the metal one he wears. No matter which theater of war he's in, however, he'll like shower-bath clogs, bedroom slippers of the folding moccasin type, good-looking handkerchiefs, plastic dog-tag chains, identification bracelet, sun glasses with dependable lenses, and if he's a pathfinder, a wrist compass.

Also recommended for a G. I. are scout knives that perform many acts, wash rags, small towels, coat hangers, saddle soap, pocket-size comb and superior razor blades which may be purchased packed in a holiday mailing envelope that makes a festive "stuffer."

Toiletry gifts that are useful are foot powder, sun and wind lotion, after-shave lotion, hair-dressing preparation for stubborn locks, in-

Wage Rates By Formula

The WLB panel which, apparently has given President Roosevelt a green light on revision of the "little steel" formula—upward—wisely and necessarily admitted it did not know how much living costs had increased since January, 1941. The fact is, of course, that no one knows.

For different wage earners supporting families on identical wages, the cost of living has increased in different amounts. Some had good breaks, some had bad ones. Some lived in communities where prices rose sharply, some in communities where the rise was moderate, perhaps even less than the increase in the bureau of labor statistics index which is the only available statistic with any official standing. Some wage earners responded to the increase in their earning power made possible by full time and overtime by saving money, while others had an opposite reaction and spent money in ratio to their higher rate of income. All that the bureau of labor statistics index ever purported to be was an indication of the increase and decrease in prices of certain basic commodities and services; it was never intended to be a guide to the cost of living, which is so widely variable that it defies statistical analysis.

It may be that the attempt to subvert the index to this unnatural purpose will prove in the long run the only really important consequence of the controversy over the "little steel" formula for wage stabilization. If wage rates are to be tied to a statistical abstraction when it is moving in one direction—favorable to an increase—then they logically could be tied to the same abstraction when it moves in the opposite direction. In short, it is not too soon to begin to wonder what would happen now if the bureau of labor statistics index began to decline—would wage rates, thereupon, be expected to decline with it?

Hitler's Worst Moment

Unexpectedly quick success in breaching Germany's western defenses seems to confirm again the fallacy of static defenses. The Westwall is the end of the great lines in World War II. While the Gothic line in Italy still is a factor in the fighting there, it could be shattered with a fraction of the tremendous power loosed in France.

The fact is, however, that the fallacy of static defenses is not so much military as political. Militarily, such lines perform their function, which is to provide defense up to the point at which an opponent concentrates enough power to break them. Thus, the original purpose of the Westwall was to offset the Allies' inferior striking power in the west while Germany attacked Russia; that purpose was satisfied. No one knows better than the German generals that the Allies now have striking power of such magnitude that their western defenses have only nuisance value.

But politicians cannot afford to be realistic about such things. French politicians in 1940, like German politicians now, could not tell their people the truth; the people wanted to believe in the Maginot line. The fault is not confined to Europeans, either. Americans wanted to believe Pearl Harbor was unassailable, and it will be many a long year before they recover from the shock of discovering that Japan had massed enough striking power to offset it temporarily as the key to our Pacific defense. The breaching of the Westwall, however important it may be from a military standpoint, will be twice as important in its political effect inside Germany. Adolf Hitler has had his worst moment of World War II.

Remote Control Destruction

The shape of the next war—the one which is going to be prevented—is being determined by the experience of this one. The technique of the future will be increasingly toward remote control destruction.

The Germans announce they have a radio-controlled explosion boat which has been doing heavy damage in the English channel. Their robot bombs were a ghastly success. They have been experimenting with remote control on land tanks and aerial torpedoes. Submarine torpedoes, no doubt, will be subject to control. The airplane which releases another explosive-laden plane and guides it to its destination has been introduced.

The United States announces it is abreast of all these developments, and it may be taken for granted they will not be neglected by any other power. Increasing mastery of the mystery of electronics is determining the weapons of destruction for the future. Unless they are mastered, in turn, by corresponding increases in men's mastery of their hatreds, such weapons will surely have their day.

All of the so-called modern weapons of the current war were tried out in World War I—The bombing plane, the strafing plane, the tank, land mine and torpedo. The devices of destruction lie in the public domain, so to speak, accessible to those who choose to use them. The problem of peace is not weapons, but the decision to use them.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, September 20

A MODERATELY successful and busy day is read from predominant planetary aspects, both lunar and mutual. Employers, influential persons, especially in political, diplomatic, community and corporation affiliations, should move to satisfactory agreements, which should be made with care and consideration, and with a degree of precaution against speculative investments and other dubious alliances. In personal relations there may be happy readjustments with elders or relatives.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of moderate success and happiness, with some sort of public or group recognition and cooperation. Employers, elders, and those in influential posts may be approached for support and favors with confidence, a friendly condition also to be found in connection with social, domestic or literary affiliations. Public relations and travel are encouraged.

A child born on this day should be possessed of versatility and talents fitting it for progress and a place in literary, business or domestic and social prestige and success, with elders cooperative.

Fortunate Second Thought

By James Thrasher

Probably we should rejoice in the report that delegates conferring at Dumbarton Oaks have decided to give the smaller nations a voice in establishing and maintaining peace through international cooperation. Actually, we might be a trifle aghast to learn that they had strong notions to the contrary at first.

It has also been reported—all in reports, leaks and rumors from this closed conference—that early drafts of the security plan gave power of veto only to the four major powers. This would have allowed these powers to requisition facilities and troops from small nations without giving them a chance to vote on or even discuss the decision. Happily, the delegates seem now to have seen the light.

Some engineering problems tend to increase or develop when a small working model is expanded to full-scale plant operation. Perhaps the same is true in moving the machinery of peace from a national to an international scale.

But it is hard to see how the diplomatic mind could have departed quite so far from established principles of fairness as they seem to have in their first draft of a world-wide security union.

That first draft would not have been discernibly different from a move in this country to refuse the representatives of our less populous states the right to vote on a declaration of war, and then to draft the soldiers of those states for the armed forces.

In short, the delegates' early philosophy was, as one of them is said to have eventually discovered, "taxation without representation."

Maybe all this is undue worry about something that never happened. But it is nevertheless disquieting. It is nice to know that the idea of a virtual coalition of big powers has been abandoned, and that small nations will not be voiceless in any dispute between a small power and a great one. Yet it would have been nicer to know that the idea never came up.

Here, it seems to us, is one more argument for calling off the guard at Dumbarton Oaks and letting the world know what goes on there. Otherwise the conferring governments must face the certainty that some of their citizens will make the suspicious accusation of "open covenants" arrived at in secret session.

And they will not be able to keep those citizens from wondering what, if anything, went on that didn't leak through the secrecy.

The height of foolishness is living expensively to impress the people who live expensively to impress you.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Fatigue Symptoms and Their Causes

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IF I WERE a young physician casting about for a life work or a theme for study I would choose the symptom of fatigue. I believe that if a man understands that all medical mystery will be opened to him.

Everyone knows what it is. Everyone has experienced it. It is the second commonest of all symptoms. Meakins found that 66 of a 1,000 complained most of weakness or fatigue. And yet familiar as it is what does it consist in? Where is it located? How can you describe it?

It occurs as a perfectly normal and explainable result of exertion, a long period of concentrated work. That is physiological fatigue. It occurs as a symptom of many, if not most, organic diseases, as a constant accompaniment, not the result of exertion. And, as we all know, in the form of "that tired feeling" it is the congenial endowment of a certain class of people who do nothing to deserve it. In fact the only classes of human beings who do not seem to suffer from fatigue sometime or other are idiots, Vice-presidential candidates, and little boys.

Fatigue Manifestations

How do you know when you are fatigued? It may seem a foolish question, but, according to Dr. Donald Laird, who has studied it in a psychological laboratory, fatigue may manifest itself in many unexpected ways. Restlessness for one. Excessive perspiration, candy and tobacco taste flat, itchiness, a tendency to laugh senselessly, a tendency to misplace constantly used articles, such as spectacles or false teeth, a tendency to change to another job before completing the one you are on are some of the others.

Physiologists have talked for a long time about the accumulation of fatigue substances in the blood, but the only definitely proved chemical substance found is lactic acid.

Causes of Fatigue

Study of the causes of fatigue resulting from exertion show preponderantly that it is not so much the exertion itself that will cause fatigue as extraneous factors—such as lack of rest pauses, inadequate sleep between working days.

and light, noise, vibration and ventilation. When noise in a work room is louder than 45 decibels it precipitates a body reaction consisting of tenseness of muscles, both voluntary and involuntary, and increased blood pressure. Professional typists, under test conditions, showed these reactions 18 per cent more when typing in a room with 55 decibels noise than in the same room with 40 decibels noise. Vibration is what tires you in automobile or train riding.

Nutrition, as might be expected, plays a constant and major role in reducing fatigue. No, not vitamins, just plain old sugar! At Colgate University fatigue recovery on climbing two flights of stairs was carefully measured and the fatigue recovery value of eating sugar before hand can be calculated in almost mathematical terms. The improvement on sugar days was 3.9 per cent better for the motor-visual reaction time, 11 per cent better for body sway with the stadiograph, 2 per cent better for eye-hand coordination, and 1½ per cent better for attention lag. That is getting it down pretty fine. It certainly justifies the mid-morning and mid-afternoon snack, and shows up the pop and cola and ice cream and candy bar vending machines not as a base commercial form of pandering, but as a highly scientific and properly accredited aid to industry.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. W.—Should a woman who is pregnant take calcium phosphorus wafers? If so how much and what kind?

Answer: The pregnant woman needs lots of calcium and phosphorus, but the best way to get them is in ordinary food stuffs—milk, eggs, vegetables, fruits.

E. L. M.—I am a middle aged woman and for the past 18 months I have had a slight discharge from the left nipple. I have no lump and no sore spots. What should I do?

Answer: Run, don't walk, to the nearest doctor and submit to a thorough examination. It may or may not be serious.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. THE REST OF MY LIFE WITH YOU

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Matthew said irritably, "We've been quiet enough ever since we were married because of your mourning. I thought, in a few months, we'd have a little more fun."

"Isn't it been fun?" she asked, her eyes intent.

"Yes, naturally. But confound it!" he said, "you're young, you're lovely, I want to take you places, show you off—I—"

Judith interrupted, "As if I were new car or a new toy?"

"Don't be idiotic," he frowned, "that isn't like you. Sounds like a bad play."

"You spoke about plenty of time. Well, there's always time for that sort of thing, Matthew."

"If you have a baby, that means more months of staying home, being quiet—"

"He broke off and she saw the shadow in his eyes. She thought: He hates my being ill, even the thought of it. I suppose that's natural, not only because he loves me, but because he's with people who are ill all day long and sometimes half the night. But he's thinking of Irene too and how she died, before she could have her baby...."

Judith was not disturbed, because of this. She was filled with pity for him, with pity for the unfulfilled ghost, gentle and effacing, which had once been a living woman and his wife.

Matthew said, "I won't have it. I told you how I felt about it and that's that. I simply won't have it."

"Very well," she turned to adjust her little hat before the mirror. "Let's go, shall we? We're late as it is.... but we can see one of the features."

At the door Matthew caught her hard against him. He declared, "If anything ever happened to you—"

"Nothing could," Judith said serenely. "Don't worry so. And the best thing that could happen to me," she added, "would be to have your child."

"You get your own way too much. But not this time.... Mrs. Norman," he told her.

During the late spring, Mary took a small house at Easthampton and suggested that Judith and Matthew consider it their own.... "until you have one," she added.

She and Judith had been looking for a little place near New York, one within commuting distance where, when Matthew was free, they could spend weekends, but as yet they had found nothing suitable.

"We'll have to build," decided Matthew, "although where, I wouldn't know. But with things as they are it isn't a bad idea, financially speaking, to own the roof over our heads."

Matthew wouldn't. Yet later in the summer he said casually, "I knew it would work out better if you didn't see so much of Elizabeth socially."

"How do you mean, 'work out'?" asked Judith. "And by the way, it was her doing, not mine."

"It was?" his brows drew together for a moment, then his face cleared. "Well, she had more sense than you. It doesn't mix, I tell you. I've proved it too, I think. You have a hundred friends," he said carefully, and added smiling, "which has been very good for business."

Judith said after a moment, "I haven't recommended you—Dr. Norman—if that's what you mean."

"Very reprehensible," her husband told her, unruffled. "It's part of your job."

She said, after a moment, "And you see those friends of mine professionally.... Some of them socially, now that we're going out more, accepting more invitations. That doesn't seem to hamper you."

He looked at her with the utmost astonishment. "It's quite different," he protested.

"How?"

"Elizabeth," he explained shortly, "is an employee." He looked at her, puzzled.

His wife asked, "Matthew, must you always have your way?"

"It's my way if it doesn't happen to be yours? How like a woman," he told her.

"That's logical enough," Judith retorted. She added, "I always thought you were spoiled."

"Who spoiled me?"

"Your mother, first of all." She paused a moment, added briefly, "And, of course, Irene."

He said, "You're crazy. I've always stood on my own feet. No woman has had any influence—except you," he added, smiling at her, "and you have altogether too much."

Judith thought: Yes, of course. I could fight this Elizabeth thing to the finish with you, and win. And the other, more important, too. I'd use my one sure weapon....

These Are The Gifts Servicemen Will Want

Photos of the Folks and Fancy Foods Are First On His Christmas List

What a guy overseas wants more for Christmas is a new picture—pocket-sized and in a waterproof folder—of his mom, wife, child, sweetheart, kid brother or that nut called "Tosser." With that taken care of, there are other gifts which he will prize if they satisfy a sweet tooth, amuse him, increase his comfort or have a sentimental value.

There are also gifts which he frankly doesn't want, and in a few bottles, if he's where he can't get them, he'll like these: Fruit cake, lobster paste, anchovy and other tinned spreads, benedict, chicken, nuts and chocolate provided as additions to his G. I. wardrobe.

Also recommended for a G. I. agent are Scout knives that perform many acts, wash rags, small towels, coat hangers, saddle soap, pocket-size comb and superior razor blades which may be purchased packed in a holiday mailing envelope that makes a festive "stuffer."

Toiletry gifts that are useful are foot powder, sun and wind lotion, after-shave lotion, hair-dressing preparation for stubborn locks, in-

PIN-WORMS

At Last—
A Real Treatment!

You may not realize how many of your neighbors—grown-ups as well as children—have Pin-Worms at this very moment. People don't talk about this nasty infection, sometimes they are too embarrassed to mention the tormenting rectal itching and up to now they have usually suffered in silence because they have not known of any effective way to deal with this dreadful pest that lives inside the human body.

Important Medical Discovery

Today, thanks to a valuable scientific discovery, a remarkable new treatment has been made possible. It is based on a special drug, known as gentian violet. This drug is the vital element in P-W, the new Pin-Worm tablets developed by Dr. D. Jayne & Son, America's leading specialists in worm medicine. P-W tablets are small and easy to take, and they get in a special, gentle way to destroy Pin-Worms.

It is very easy to "catch" this nasty infection, and the ugly structures can cause real distress. So watch for the signs that may mean Pin-Worms: itching anal, uneasy stomach, bed-wetting, nervous disposition. If you suspect Pin-Worms, get a box of P-W right away and follow the simple directions carefully.

P-W means Pin-Worm relief!

COLLEGE SHOP COLLECTIONS BOON TO BUSINESS GIRL

Fashion-smart junior business women are wise to take advantage of the college shop collections, for here the junior-size girl who has left school for business may find her properly styled, sized and coordinated wardrobe all assembled for her individual choice. In the trio of college shop clothes shown here today, it's the date dress which can go to the office which is stressed. Accessories, added or subtracted, accomplish the metamorphosis. Pearl embroidery at the neck dresses up the light blue wool jersey shown at left. Stunning contrast with it is the new 25-inch topcoat in fuchsia wool which the model holds. The trim checked outfit is a suit-dress of lumberjack cut to be worn with or without a blouse. Made of fine shepherd check in black and white wool, it is fastened with black bone buttons. Girl at the right chooses black accessories to set off her bright Kelly green wool. The dress features a big Windsor tie of self fabric and peplum suggestion of self-ruffling at either hip. BELLAIRE, Sept. 18.—A touching letter written by the hero of the Poshan mine fire to his family as he awaited death with 65 other miners deep in the flame-seared pit July 5 was released today as rescue crews came upon the bodies of three more victims.

It was written by George Emery, 42, a foreman who passed up the opportunity of certain escape as the fire started and hurried deep into the mine to help his companions. His body was found last week along with 50 others.

With him a rescue crew found a letter written the night of July 5 as the air in the mine turned slowly to deadly gas and smoke from the fire crept into the chamber where they sought safety. It said:

"Dear wife and family:

"I write you these few lines at 6:30 p. m. I am O. K. My head hurts but some of the men are down. I have asked the Lord Christ to have mercy on our souls. The boys are taking things pretty good. I wrote you before, but I lost the writing. We can't locate Dain Briggs and two men that are with him. He is on the entry somewhere. I have sent Abergey and James Gibson to look for him and two men. They will report back to me. I am too dizzy to go myself. I write this at the face of No. 3 room out E right C north. I could have got out through the main air way, but I had to get my men out.

Expresses Love For Family

"I tried to get out through 7 right and C north but I could not do so I got to the head of the entry. I think, anyway, I could not go any farther. I had instructed Dain and Gibson to build barricades but they only put up canvas. When I came back from the top of 7 right, I started the men on the barricades. We did not do so bad for a while but the smoke got us down. We put up three barricades the best we could. It is now 8:17 p. m. (Relatives believe he meant 6:17 p. m.)

"6:33 p. m. to 7 p. m. My dear wife:

"Take good care of the kids, more of Sam (his 23-month-old daughter). She is small. The others can take care of themselves. I love all of you the same. Give my regards to my people and yours. All that I have is yours. I have a fine family I know and I love you all. Abergey just came back. He can't find Briggs so we don't know where he is at.

"Now 7:02 p. m. Everyone still O. K. We are very cold because we took our clothes to stop the holes in our barricade. We have plenty of water yet. Ralph Vilkoski don't look so good.

"7:11 p. m. The boys are starting to move toward the face. The smoke is coming in slow.

One Man Sings Hymns

"7:22 p. m. I'm going to make a round of the men. I have returned to the group in No. 3 room after I had checked all the men. All O. K. but one. But he looks better than he did. His name is Bill Vinski.

"I am in No. 4 room on the right. This room still clear of smoke. Abergey is with me. We were out on the butt entry. There is a lot of smoke, but we do expect to be rescued.

"It is 8 p. m. We have one man singing hymns in No. 4 room. I am back in No. 3 room again.

"8:30 p. m. The smoke is slowly creeping up on us. I was out on the butt entry but there is too much smoke.

"It is 8:15 p. m. I have just asked the Lord's divine blessing on us who are trapped here and I do hope he heard my prayer. Most of the boys are laying around and they are very cold. My head just jumps. My heart tries to get out of my shirt at times. We are not afraid as yet, but we are sick at the stomach. It won't be long now unless we have a miracle. It is now 8:27 p. m.

"There is very little movement among the men at 8:40 p. m. Some of the boys are vomiting. It is now 8:43 p. m. I would like to ask the coal company to see that my family is taken care of. You know that I have a very young child—Sam. Oh, how I love her. Everything I own I want my wife to have. I also want her to take care of my children.

Pray for Deliverance

"9:10 p. m. They must have got the air off the fire. The smoke is not spreading so fast now. 9:20 p. m. We have again asked the good Lord to spare our lives.

"10:50 p. m. (Apparently he meant 9:50 p. m.) Some of the boys are writing notes. Now our hopes are still good but that fumes are in with us now and it seems to be pyrene. You can believe it or not, some of the boys sleep like they were at home in their beds. I am far from happy. I expect the boys are re-covering 5 and 6 right, that's what takes them so long.

"9:58 p. m. I can smell the fumes right here in the face of No. 3 room now at 10 p. m. I can see the boys' faces are getting pretty red.

"10:05 p. m. The men are starting to move around. The smoke has run them out No. 4 room. The men are sick and throwing up. It can't be too long now. The Bill that was out is walking around now. Ralph, C North operator, just fell down. Some of the men are in great pain or fear. They are making a lot of noise. God have mercy on us all. It is 10:15 p. m. My head is starting to thump again. 10:17 p. m. My safety lamp still burns. It must be C. O. (carbon monoxide) or pyrene that makes us so sick.

"10:22 p. m. I have been around again. A lot of the men are out. I tried to help. It's too late for them and me. God bless us. 10:32 p. m.

"10:40 p. m. I can see the smoke in this place. The men are restless. We are talking about death. That is a bad sign. I am starting to vomit now myself. I am lying down. Too sick to explore. But light still burns. Abergey is laying next to me back to back. He is a very brave man, which we have found (sic) at a time like this. God bless us all. I don't think we can last much longer. LAST BARRIER FACING ALLIED INVADERS.

AS ALLIED ARMIES prepare to assault the Siegfried Line, Nazi supplies and reinforcements stream forward in strength—for this formidable defense system is Germany's last hope. If the barrier is broken quickly, Hitler's armies, deficient in motorized equipment and armor, can be rolled back from the Line before they can reorganize and dig into holding positions. The Line, running from the Swiss frontier almost to the Rhine river at the German-Holland border is a series of connected defense zones that vary in strength and depth at different points. These areas are indicated by number on the map above. (The general construction of the Line is indicated in the illustration.) Further supplementing the defenses are natural barriers. To the north, in Holland, where the line is said to be weak (shaded), any attempt to flank it would be a hazardous operation. The country is flat, low, and criss-crossed by numerous rivers and canals presenting

Massillon, Canton McKinley Powerhouses Looming Again

Both Teams Show Immense Power In Weekend Openers As They Pile Up Big Scores

By HAROLD HARRISON
COLUMBUS, Sept. 19.—The first 1944 Ohio high school football season is under way. Northeastern grid fans have it doped out that Canton McKinley and Massillon will be playing for the mythical state championship when they get together Nov. 18.

Certainly they gave every indication in their openers during the past weekend that they intend to come up to that traditional tilt with perfect records. McKinley, starting slowly, finally went into high gear and romped home with a 59 to 0 triumph over Akron South and Massillon, using its regulars for only 24 minutes, galloped over Akron West, 60 to 7.

Meanwhile, at least four schools which didn't last a game in 1943 suffered defeats in their first engagements of this season. Toledo Waite's string of 11 straight triumphs was snapped by Toledo Labby, 7 to 0. Van Wert, winner of its last 11 games, took a 12 to 7 beating from Bryan. Fredericktown, which gave Offie Cline to Ohio State, dropped a 19 to 0 decision to Mt. Vernon.

That game, incidentally, was Mt. Vernon's first gridiron triumph in 13 years. Hubbard took a 34 to 0 beating from Warren Harding.

Newark and Lorain, however, were among the unbeaten eleven of 1943 which started off this fall in the black. Newark, which had to do a lot of rebuilding, was 39 to 0 victor over Columbus East, and Lorain chalked up its 13th consecutive triumph by beating Akron North, 19 to 0. Lorain hasn't been beaten since Oct. 1, 1942.

Canton McKinley scored its opening triumph with a lineup which included seven boys who either were regulars last fall or saw considerable service. The Bulldog backfield, averaging 164 pounds was led by Senior Joe Pujazon, who was described by coaches who scouted the game as being just about the hottest passer they had seen in a long time.

Massillon's victory over Akron West was something for the books. The regulars scored every time they got their hands on the ball except once and then they left the ball so deep in West's territory they promptly blocked a punt and recovered it for a touchdown.

The second stringers had to punt only twice and the third team once.

Capitalizing on blinding speed and devastating blocking, the Tigers did things like this:

Traveled 76 yards in five plays for one touchdown; went from mid-field in four plays for another; went 52 yards in six plays for still another marker; moved 60 yards in nine plays to score and then covered 40 yards in four plays to add another six-pointer.

Massillon and Columbus North, both highly touted in

Joe McCarthy Is Like a Good Poker Player: Plays Cards Dealt Him To Best of His Ability; Handles Men and Adjusts Game To Situation

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—Regardless of where the Yankees finish on the road—first, second, third or fourth—never again let it be said that Joseph Vincent McCarthy does it by pushing a button. There were no convenient buzzers for Joe McCarthy to step on this trip. There never has been a superior performance on the part of a manager.

What has enabled Mr. McCarthy, as the athletes call him, to compile the finest managerial record in baseball history? The Buffalo Irishman won two pennants in Louisville, another with the Chicago Cubs and is now in the thick of the fight for his ninth flag and eighth world championship in 14 years with the Yankees.

It goes without saying that Mr. McCarthy knows how to handle men. He builds confidence, but the nearest description of him is that he is like a good poker player. He plays cards dealt him to the best of his ability.

An old second baseman, Mr. McCarthy is a master of infield play. He knows when to keep Frank Crosetti and associates back on the grass when to pull them in. There is no closer student of hitters. He has an uncanny sense of where to deploy his players.

Mr. McCarthy is basically conservative, yet has a flair for the spectacular, does not hesitate to gamble when he considers the stage properly set and it worth the risk. He adjusts his game to the situation.

The Indians checked into Yankee Stadium in front early in 1942. Scooter Ritzuto got on, and Mr. McCarthy put on the hit and run three times in succession—with Red Rolfe, Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich at bat.

Then, in the eighth with the bases full, he had Bill Dickey bank. This was so unexpected that the ball had been like an imbedded rock. I asked Mr. McCarthy about it. "The Cleveland club is always jittery when it comes into the Stadium," he explained. "This time it has a new manager and a lot of kids. I figured that if we'd scramble things up a bit at the start, they'd spend the rest of the time looking for something to happen to them."

They did. The Yankees swept a three-game set, took the lead and were never headed.

Mr. McCarthy's mind is always on the next game. No one in the party speaks exultantly about winning—not until the pennant or World Series is clinched. The Yankees know the boss' mind is on the next game.

Mr. McCarthy has complete command of his men on and off the field. They reflect the head man. Their conduct is exemplary. They are the sharpest dressed club in baseball.

The Yankees were in a throes of a seven-game losing streak in Boston in June. Entering the hotel lobby, Mr. McCarthy found a group of them slouched in chairs, legs slung over the arms.

Mr. McCarthy, hat in hand, took one quick look at them, snapped "So you're the Yankees!" and walked away.

The Yankees have been picking up their feet ever since.

Joe McCarthy . . . on top of the world as usual.

Young Cecil Isbell, New Purdue Coach, Opens With Tough Great Lakes Squad

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Cecil Isbell, Purdue's 29-year-old football coach, will make his debut as boss-man the hard way Saturday as he sends his untested Boilermakers against the formidable Bluejackets at Great Lakes, Ill.

Paul Brown, Ohio State's coaching gift to the Naval station, might like to soften things for Isbell, who just 10 years ago this month pranced onto Purdue's gridiron as a promising freshman halfback, but he's trying to make good on a new job himself.

Brown, who broke into the Big Ten mentoring circles just a few years ago, hardly got a look at his Bluejacket regulars last Saturday as they opened with a 62-0 rout of hapless Mt. Sheridan.

Which means a whale of a ball game is in prospect at Great Lakes Saturday afternoon.

Isbell warned his regulars yesterday they'd have to play "sixty minutes" football to emulate last year's 23-13 upset of Great Lakes. That 1943 setback is another reason Brown and company won't be inclined to send Cecil home happy.

Visiting the midwest camp:

Veteran Halfback Eddie Bray rejoined the active list at Illinois and probably will start against Indiana Saturday. . . . The Hoosiers, meanwhile, worked on half-handling after a checkup showed no injuries from the opener with Ft. Knox, Ky. . . . Coach Fritz Crider pointed out mistakes in their rebut against Iowa Pre-Flight as Michigan's Wolverines launched drills for their invasion of Marquette.

Carroll Widows handed Ohio State several new plays and had his Buckeyes concentrate on passing. . . . Notre Dame's linemen scrimmaged briefly as head coach Ed McKeever spent considerable time working on backfield timing. . . . At Northwestern, Veteran Guard Ray Juskat of Whiting, Ind., was elected captain for the season which opens Friday night against DePaul. . . . Wisconsin's Harry Stuhldreher

INDIANS MAY END RED SOX'S HOPES

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—Cleveland's Indians clash with the Boston Red Sox tonight in the opener of a three game series that may eliminate Boston as a pennant contender.

The Red Sox now are four games out of first place and one or two defeats in the series would remove them from championship consideration.

Steve Gromek, who beat the league-leading Detroit Tigers twice in five days, will hurl for the Tribesmen against Rex Cecil.

The puff adder, native to Michigan, is harmless despite its fearsome appearance.

Heads Them All

John Adams, six-foot seven-inch Notre Dame tackle, and half-back Steve Nemeth, who wears a new 6 1/2 inch commitment travesty on headgear fashions in exchanging helmets. Adams' 8 3/4 inch is probably largest active football helmet requirement.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—When Jimmy Conzelman, assistant to president Don Barnes of the Browns, was in the throes of composing that rousing football ditty, "It's in the cards to win," he stopped to point out: "You notice I don't say we WILL win." Now it begins to look as if Jimmy's Chicago Cardinals song could be transferred to the St. Louis bunch without changing either the title or the comment. . . . If the world series were starting today, we'd pick the Tigers in a walkover.

TOUGH PICKING

When the managers of the Central Pacific Service baseball league picked an All-Star team at the end of the season, they refused to consider Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Mize because they hadn't played enough games in Hawaii but created a utility post for Tom Ferrick because the former Cleveland flinger had done some mighty hitting besides taking a regular turn on the hill. . . . The team they picked: Pitchers, Vern Olsen, Don Schmidt and Hugh Casey; catcher, Vince Smith; infielders, Ferris Fain, Joe Gordon, Bob Dillinger and Peeewe Reese; outfielders, Mike McCormick, Barney McCloskey and Walt Judnick. . . . Maybe it's just as well for the big leaguers that it's just an Army-Navy world series starting there Friday.

PASS INTERCEPTED

This story trickled back from the recent Packers-Boston Yanks exhibition in Buffalo. . . . The mornning of the game, Frank Santora, 17-year-old Yank quarterback fresh out of Garfield, N. J., high school, was telling a stranger in the hotel lobby about his football skill. . . . Santora has just disposed of George Cafego as a Yank "regular" when another stranger came along and asked: "Going to breakfast, Don?"

Santora stared and gulped as he began to recognize his listener then finally blurted: "Gosh, you couldn't be—you couldn't be—Don. Hutson, could you?"

Hutson admitted his identity and all Frank could say was "Gee whiz, Mr. Hutson, I sure am glad to know you." He probably found that the only time folks in that league are glad to know Don is off the field.

Agriculture Group Votes Rubber Program Approval

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A senate agriculture subcommittee recommended today that the nation's grain-into-rubber industry be continued after the war to assure a market for surplus grains and an adequate source of rubber in the event of another conflict.

Chairman Gillette (D-Iowa) told the senate that the continued use of grain for the making of synthetic rubber would provide employment on farms and in rubber factories and be a better solution to the farm problem than "paying farmers not to produce grain."

The committee to survey the advisability of turning surplus grains in ever-greater quantities into the industrial market.

TRAIN GUARDS SELECT GROUP

M. P.'s Who Insure Discipline On Ohio Trains, Don't Need Tickets

COLUMBUS—A select group of about 300 men who travel a total of approximately 50,000 miles a day on trains in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia never have to worry about making train reservations.

These men are the Army's Military Police train guards, who patrol more than 150 through passenger trains in the Fifth Service command in order to insure proper discipline among military passengers and give advice and assistance to the tremendous number of soldiers who travel through this area on duty as well as on furlough.

"The train guards are performing an outstanding job," said Maj. Gen. James L. Collins, commanding general of the Fifth Service command, "and the military traffic in this heavily-traveled region is handled smoothly as a result of their work. Railroad officials have frequently commended the M. P.'s for their efficiency."

Two Units In Ohio

The Service command train M. P.'s are attached to two train guard units, one in Cleveland and the other in Cincinnati. The Cleveland unit, commanded by Maj. Harry H. Stahl, has detachments based at Crestline and Columbus, and the Cincinnati unit, headed by Captain Frederick T. Thomas, has similar detachments at Louisville and Indianapolis.

On about half the trains to which the M. P.'s are assigned, the Army guards ride with members of the Navy's Shore patrol, who have similar duties. Together, the M. P.'s and the S. P.'s check the travel orders and pass and furlough papers of more than 500,000 Army and Navy men a month.

Cooperation between the M. P.'s and the S. P.'s also is illustrated by their joint operation of military personnel information booths at railroad stations. The booth in the Cleveland Union terminal receives upwards of 4,000 inquiries a week from soldiers and sailors seeking various types of information.

The aim of his organization is to help the soldier and not hinder him," according to Maj. Stahl, who believes that "more files can be brought with sugar than with vinegar." As evidence that soldiers, for the most part, are well behaved on trains, he cited the record of a veteran M. P., who, in more than 300,000 miles of train travel, has arrested only one soldier for misconduct.

Many Overstay Leaves

The greatest number of offenders consist of men who have slightly overstayed the authorized period prescribed by passes and furloughs, reports Lieut. B. E. Haines, chief of the Military Police branch of the Fifth Service command, which is under the supervision of Lieut. Col. Harry E. Erickson, provost marshal general.

In addition to making routine checks of travel papers of all military personnel, the M. P.'s are called upon to perform a wide variety of emergency tasks. These include taking sick soldiers to hospitals, making travel arrangements for stranded service men who are temporarily without funds, and giving first aid treatment in the event of accidents.

The M. P.'s work closely with train crews and transmit their messages through the same communication systems used by railroad workers. At the larger and more congested railroad terminals, they direct passenger traffic thereby aiding both military personnel and civilians.

On Duty Seven Days a Week

The train M. P.'s, easily distinguished by their brassards, white eggings and white hat covers, are attached to the Army Service Forces. They all receive special training and many have been on duty overseas as guards of prisoners of war. Their train runs, including layovers, average about 20 hours and they are on duty seven days a week.

The M. P.'s themselves are subject to frequent inspections made by inspecting officers from their units and from the Military Police Division of the Office of the Provost Marshal General, Washington. The inspecting officers, in addition to supervising the work of the M. P.'s, make reports on travel conditions on various trains.

On those occasions when they are on pass or furlough, the M. P.'s do not wear their brassards and they must also show their travel papers to the M. P. guards, the same as any other "G. I." The fact that they are M. P.'s gives them no special privileges and when they are traveling on their own time, they stand in line and wait to buy railroad tickets, too.

East Palestine Clamps Restrictions On Dogs

EAST PALESTINE, Sept. 19.—A strict quarantine of all dogs in this vicinity has been put into effect following the shooting of a rabid infected Fox Terrier over the weekend on the Charles Parker farm, west of the city.

Parker discovered the diseased terrier attacking some of his farm pets and shot him. An examination of the head in Columbus proved that the dog was mad.

Police Chief George Neff said all dogs found loose in the city will be shot.

'Chutes To Safety

PORTSMOUTH, Sept. 19.—A pilot parachuted to safety last night from an army pursuit plane which crashed and burned on a farm near Fullerton, Ky. The aviator landed in a 75 foot tree on the farm of Carl Hayward. Police said they understood the plane was from Romulus, Mich.

3 E. LIVERPOOL SLAYINGS YET UNSOLVED; NEW TIP FAILS TO THROW LIGHT ON CRIMES

EAST LIVERPOOL, Sept. 19.—Columbiana county authorities today continued their investigation of strange murders here after two prisoners in a Fairmount, W. Va., jail said they possessed information linking two Pittsburgh district men with one of the crimes.

Sheriff George E. Hayes went to Pittsburgh over the weekend to check angles of the West Virginians' story involving the unsolved slaying here in June of an unidentified woman who was believed to have been a follower of a carnival.

The woman, whose body was tossed into weeds in an eastern residential area after she was strangled, was buried in an unknown grave after 3,000 persons were unable to identify her.

Legion Installs New Officers, Make Plans To Alter War Roster

Installation of officers of Charles H. Carey post No. 56, American Legion, headed by Commander Lee Hollinger, was conducted at the Legion home Monday night by Past Commander and Chaplain Everett J. Rich.

Commander Hollinger announced appointment of the following officers: Adjutant, C. L. Seckel; sergeant-at-arms, William Probert; chaplain, M. H. Critchfield.

Tentative plans for the reconstruction of the present service honor roll were discussed. Arrangements call for the board to be made into a panel system with names arranged alphabetically. Officers of the Legion explained that some 3,000 names on the board will have to be rearranged and inscribed on the new type roll.

To finance the project, the Legion will sponsor a benefit performance of the Camp Reynolds Army show here Oct. 5. The troupe of entertainers from this county has been touring Army installations in the area for more than a year and are seeking funds to provide members with new uniforms and expenses to continue presentation of the entertainment for servicemen. Part of the proceeds from the show here will be used by the local Legionnaires for the honor roll work and part will go toward the purchase of troupe uniforms.

The Legion will meet again Oct. 2 at the post home.

RHINE BATTLE

at Nijmegen and Arnhem on and above the Rhine near the Reich frontier, would seal off every major east-west road from Germany to Rotterdam, The Hague and Amsterdam through the dike-guarded lowlands south of the Holland's inland sea.

By this account, the first Allied airborne army had leaped the last and greatest Dutch water barrier, and put the fighting in the rich heart of Holland.

Allied armor would need only to smash 35 to 40 miles above Eindhoven to complete the linkup, and turn the Germans' Rhine defense.

Airborne reinforcements were thrown in steadily by the Allies.

West of Antwerp, in Belgium, Allied troops crossed northward into Holland.

In Germany a bitter cleanup fight raged toward a climax in the big city of Aachen.
